Long story short

Situated at 1,620 m above sea level, Zermatt is the southernmost place in German-speaking Europe today. The only access to Zermatt without crossing a pass is from Visp, on the north side, through the long valley of the Mattervispa. The first visitors to Zermatt came to explore the flora, as well as the rocks and glaciers. Triggered by the first ascent of Jungfrau in 1811, the interest soon turned to the high mountains.

The golden age of alpinism had begun: Between 1855 and 1894, the mountain range of the inner Nikolai Valley recorded no fewer than 58 first ascents and 47 first traverses. Mountaineering in Zermatt is a paradise for alpinists from all over the world: 38 peaks over 4,000 m high offer an infinite variety of challenges, including the Matterhorn (4,478 m above sea level), a «must-see» attraction in Switzerland and the most-photographed mountain in the world. The mountain fascinates people with its solitary pyramid shape against the horizon, dominating the skyline. It is one of the most difficult mountains to climb among the classic peaks in the Alps.

Railway access prompting hotel construction

The strong increase in the number of visitors in the 1890s led to a veritable boom in hotel construction in Zermatt. Before the construction of the railway between 1839 and 1891, there were only six hotels in the village, whereas a dozen new hotels were built immediately after its completion.

The Hotel Beau-Site was built by August Gindraux from Biel, and opened in 1907. The plans for this elegant Belle Époque building with its prominent central wing and tower, as well as two projecting side wings were designed by the architect Hans Winkler from St. Moritz. Today, the hotel is privately owned by the Aufdenblatten and Julen families from Zermatt.

«We are reviving the golden age of alpinism – colourful, cheerful and with a playful touch. The days of cool aloofness are definitely over. Instead, we interpret the Grand Hotel in a refreshing new way. The lobby and restaurants are inspired by a new philosophy. They are meant to stimulate and to generate good vibes. We also want to be a leader in guest experience. Providing a superior service culture means the world to us.»

Architecture and Design

Inside and outside united

It's all in the name: «Beau Site» means «the beautiful seat». The stunning hillside location alone with its view of the «Horn» (as locals call the Matterhorn in the Zermatt dialect) is breathtaking.

The historical Belle Époque building with its castle-like character (built in 1907) is testimony to the golden age of alpinism. Respectful and refreshingly courageous at the same time, with a touch of British flair, this unique building was completely renovated by the renowned interior design firm, Atelier Zurich.

The colour and material concept are strongly inspired by nature. The public rooms – reception and lobby – shine in hues of dark fir green and refreshing ice water. The reception desk is extensively adorned with ropes. Behind it, wallpaper depicting leaves and keys tells guests they have come to the right place. Those with an eye for detail will detect a stone slab in the shape of a house in the historic natural stone flooring of the lobby.

The climbing rope runs like a red thread through many of the design elements at the hotel. It connects to Zermatt's history and creates a symbiosis between the alpine world and the indoor ambience for guests. The doors to the new guest rooms are framed by rope wallpaper with a 3D effect. The 49 guest rooms in the main building are done in shades of warm honey and beige, and evoke the golden larch forests in the hills of Zermatt. The carefully selected monochromatic nuances inspired by the outdoor surroundings are combined with high-quality textiles by Mulberry, Christopher Farr and Sonnhaus that feel different to the touch to create a balanced interior and a cosy atmosphere. The bed's headboard is an eye-catcher, upholstered in Mulberry's «Fantasia Spice» fabric and framed by nautical cordage. The sofas and armchairs are made by George Smith in London, while the table lamps «Pillar Golden Smoke Dimples» by Ebb & Flow include custom-made lampshades.

The 18 rooms and suites in the villa are decorated in the nuances of the alpine environment – from blue-grey to green – and appear lighter, discreetly modern and sporty. The sofa beds are also made by George Smith in London and the armchairs with their Viennese wickerwork by Thonet. The crystal white table lamps called «Flakes» are by Favius.

«The English pioneers who conquered the mountains in Zermatt in the 19th century inspired the climbing rope theme. The rope is reminiscent of the founding of the BEAUSiTE Zermatt, but it also connects people and connotes safety. The natural environment is reflected in the colour scheme of the guest rooms. The predominant colours are green-grey glacier-water tones, dark fir green and golden hues, which are reminiscent of the Belle Époque and the golden age of alpinism.»

Gastronomy

Dining at BEAUSiTE

Two restaurants, a fondue hut, the wine box and a bar make drinking and dining at the new BEAUSiTE a special experience. Chef Christof Nienstedt creates dishes of unadorned simplicity. His cuisine is based on an unpretentious perspective. He focuses on seasonal specialities and ingredients from the region. The BEAUSiTE Zermatt keeps its own livestock, and sources dairy products and cheese from a local farm.

The Grill

The restaurant «The Grill» is radiant with hues of red and black. The old wrought-iron chandeliers from the 1960s, now spray-painted in a fiery red, create a sparkling atmosphere. Here, meat, fish and vegetables are cooked on a traditional wood-fired grill and served with a unique flourish.

3 Seasons

The light-flooded main restaurant stands out with its cosy ambience, featuring wall coverings of fabric in bold colours, and serving seasonal and vegetarian specialities.

Wine Box

The choice of colours at the «Wine Box» evokes the local larch forest in autumn, resplendent with their golden needles. In the middle of the room hangs a large chandelier made of wine bottles from the BEAUSiTE cellar. The well-appointed wine list focuses on local and European wines.

1907 – Bar & Terrace

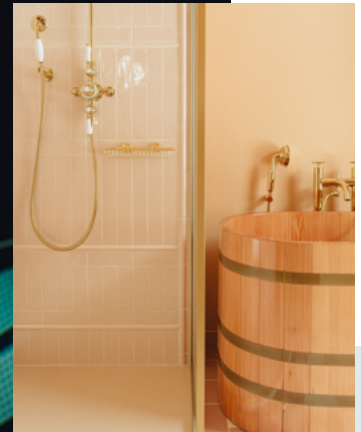

The bar serves cocktails, drinks and snacks in a vibrant atmosphere. You will find a wide range of alpine and local spirits on the bar's menu.

Witch'eesse Fondue Hut

The cosy wood chalet on the panoramic terrace with its direct view of the Matterhorn features a large table, and will accommodate up to six people sharing a delicious fondue.

Spa & Recharge Zone

A spa world for demanding alpinists

The way to the spa is marked by the installation «The Swymposium» by Swiss artist Daniel Cherbuin. The wet zone consists of two areas, one a mountain cave featuring whirlpools and the other a conservatory featuring a large indoor pool. Textiles in refreshing yellow and white colours, donning motifs reminiscent of plants, characterise the new look of the pool area. The outdoor infinity pool offers a magnificent view of the Matterhorn.

Spa area

- Finnish sauna
- Bio sauna
- Hammam
- Infra-red cabin
- Vitarium (low temperature sauna)
- Hay sauna with view of the Matterhorn
- 4 treatment rooms

Wet zone
